Thursday, April 8, 2010 at 3:00 a.m. Last Modified: Thursday, April 8, 2010 at 10:07 p.m. Gwen Smith seemed like the perfect tenant for Barbara Wilt's Sebastopol apartment. The 53-year-old single mother was articulate and bright, had good references and talked about using her law degree to help crime victims and other women raising children on their own. But what Wilt didn't know when she handed over the keys to her converted garage on Brookside Avenue in 2008 was that she was opening her doors to trouble. Read
